CITY HALL,
NEW YORK, May 19, 1874.

MY DEAR SIR:—I have for some time past had doubts whether the bill requiring the city to pay one-half the expense of the Harlem Railroad Fourth Avenue Tunnel is constitutional, because it did not occur to me to be a reasonable exercise of legislative power, that could compel the city to appropriate any portion of its funds to a private corporation, the pecuniary benefits of which were to inure to the latter, and in which the city had no share.

I wish you would examine this law critically in reference to its constitutionality, as it involves about 4,000,000 dollars of the city monies, and give me your opinion in writing as early as practicable of the conclusions to which you may arrive.

Yours truly,
W. F. HAVEMEYER.

To SIMON STERNE, Esq.

59, 61 WALL ST., (Brown Bro's Building,)
New York, June 1st, 1874.

DEAR SIR:—In compliance with your wishes I have submitted chapter 702 of the laws of 1872, entitled "An act to improve and regulate the use of Fourth Avenue in the City of New York," to an examination as to the constitutionality of its provisions. This examination has resulted in the following opinion:

In 1872 the New York and Harlem Railroad Company had and still has possession of a depot and station for its passenger trains at Forty-second street and Fourth Avenue. This station covers the intervening streets up to Forty-fifth street, and at that point the passenger trains of that corporation and of two others—the Hudson-Central and the New Haven Railroad Companies—emerge at frequent intervals, and run with steam as the motive power, at great rapidity upon the level of the street, through a closely populated district of our city, crossing at a grade between eighty and ninety streets before they reach the Harlem river, making the crossing of them all dangerous in the extreme at all times, and attended, as experience has proved, with fatal results in many cases. An agitation was commenced to compel the railroad company to run either above or below the level of the streets and the act in question was passed with the view, among other things, to accomplish that end. It was clearly within the power of the Legislature in furtherance of the interest of the public and in discharge of its duty, to protect the safety of persons and of property to compel the railway company either to discontinue the use of a public thoroughfare, altogether, when its use in the manner theretofore adopted by the corporation had become a nuisance, or to regulate its use in such manner as to conform with the public interest and welfare. And the exercise of that power carried with it no colorable right on the part of the railway corporation for compensation for necessary expenses which conformity to such a law would impose upon it. Indeed, I believe it would have been within the province of the municipality itself to abate or regulate what had become a crying evil and nuisance, and protect its citizens from dangers to life and limb. Be that as it may, however, it was certainly within the province of the Legislature to do this, and without compensation.

Section 1 of chapter 702 provides for the regulating of the grade of the railway, the building of viaducts, foot and road bridges, the construction of a tunnel or tunnels and the manner in which they are to be built and constructed, and the location thereof from Forty-fifth to One hundred and thirty first streets.

Section 2 provides that during the progress of the work, the company is authorized to lay additional tracks of a temporary character, and also embodies what, in the consideration of this question, becomes an important element, an authority "to lay down permanently two additional tracks on said avenue, and to make such landings and excavations in said avenue as may be required for such additional tracks with landings for the entrance and delivery of passengers outside of the excavations and viaducts."

This, I understand, the railway is now doing, and the cost of the so-called improvement is considerably enhanced, perhaps doubled, by the carrying out of this additional franchise thus granted to this corporation, and the building of such railway.

Section 3 authorizes a change of grade of streets when necessary, and is unimportant to this enquiry.

Section 4 regulates the width of sidewalks. Section 5 relates to the altering and removing of Croton water pipes, sewers and gas pipes, if such should become necessary by reason of the excavations.

Section 6 creates a board of engineers, names them, provides that they shall make plans and specifications, file a copy with the Comptroller, and take an oath of office.

Section 7 provides that when the plans, specifications and estimate shall be made and filed as aforesaid, the expense and cost of such improvement shall be borne and paid by the New York and Harlem Railroad Company and the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York, in equal proportion, as the construction of the said improvement progresses. The same section then proceeds to specify in detail the manner in which the half to be paid by the city is to be paid, and that "the city warrant is to be drawn in favor of the treasurer of said railroad company." This section, clearly and unequivocally, if it is in the power of the Legislature to do such an act, imposes upon the city the charge of one-half the cost of this railway enterprise.

Section 8 provides for the laying of a tax of one fourth of the whole estimated expense and cost upon the real and personal property subject to taxation, in the City and County of New York, in the year 1872, and the other fourth, in like manner in the year 1873. The same section further proceeds to authorize the Comptroller to issue revenue bonds in anticipation of the tax, and to pay out the proceeds to this railway corporation.

Section 9 inhibits the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty from interfering with the use of the said Fourth Avenue, above Forty-second street, by such railway corporation, and contains a legislative transfer to the railway corporation of all the property and value created by this joint expense, as follows: "Said tunnel and railways shall be exclusively for the uses and purposes of said railway company, and it shall not be lawful for any person or persons, other than a public officer in the execution of his duty as such, with his agents and assistants, to enter or pass upon, or through the same or any portion thereof, on foot or any other way than in the proper cars of this corporation, provided for that purpose, without the consent of said corporation, under penalty of fifty dollars for each offense, to be recovered by this corporation."

Section 10 provides that the Board of Engineers shall begin operations with reasonable expedition, and authorizes the use of steam over the line of the avenue north of Forty-second street.

Section 11 reserves to the Legislature the right to alter, amend or repeal the act.

The measure seems to be a carefully drawn one, with a clear perception of the difficulty intended to be removed, and plain provisions to accomplish that end. It abates the improper and dangerous use of one of the public thoroughfares of the City of New York by private railway corporations; and, in so far as it accomplishes that end, it is to be upheld, on grounds of public policy, and is within the scope of legislative power. And as it is a well-settled principle of our jurisprudence that an act, the constitutional provisions of which can be separated from the unconstitutional provisions, will be upheld in so far as it is unobjectionable, I believe it to be, in its main scope and object, a constitutional measure. But I am clearly of opinion that all the provisions charging upon the city half of the expense of this so-called improvement, but in reality abating of a nuisance and building of a private enterprise and levying of a tax upon the property of the citizens of New York for such purpose, to be palpably and grossly in violation of the constitution of the State of New York.

These elements of the act are to be examined in the light of the following provisions of our organic law, citing them inversely in the order of their weight upon my judgment.

Section 14 Article 7. "On the final passage in either house of the Legislature of every act which imposes, continues, or revives a tax or creates a debt or charge, or makes, continues or revives any appropriation of public or trust money, or property, or releases, discharges or commutes any claim or demand of the State, the question shall be taken by yeas and noes, which shall be duly entered on the journals, and three-fifths of all the members elected to either house shall, in all such cases, be necessary to constitute a quorum therein."

Section 13, Article 7. Every law which imposes, continues or revives a tax, shall distinctly state the tax and the object to which it is to be applied; and it shall not be sufficient to refer to any other law to fix such tax or object.

Section 16, Article 3. "No private or local bill which may be passed by the Legislature shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title."

Section 9, Article 1. The assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature, shall be requisite to every bill appropriating the public moneys or property for local or private purposes.

The fourteenth section of the seventh article was, as appears by the authorized edition of the laws, compiled with so far as the quorum is concerned, and I am disposed to assume that the yeas and noes were taken and entered pursuant to the constitution. But the fact that it is certified as a three-fifths bill indicates, at all events, that in the opinion of the Legislature it did exercise its sovereign power of taxation and complied, as to form, with the constitutional provision upon this point. With this we may dismiss the first cited provision of the constitution from consideration.

Section 13 of the same article came under review in the recent case of The People ex rel, Hopkins vs. Supervisors of Kings County, 7 Sicksles, 566; and Justice Allen, in interpreting the meaning of this section, says as follows:

The constitution prescribing the requisite of a law imposing a tax, is in harmony with the other provisions designed for the protection of the taxpayer. Its terms are precise and unambiguous, leaving no way of escape from a literal compliance with them, and no room for evasion by any lax interpretation. It declares that "every law which imposes, continues or revives a tax shall distinctly state the tax and the object to which it is to be applied, and it shall not be sufficient to refer to any other law to fix such tax or object." The law imposes a tax of three and a half mills per dollar, or so much thereof as may be necessary to provide for the payment, &c. This is not a specific and distinct statement of the tax to be levied. It is simply a statement of the maximum tax to be levied, leaving it to the discretion of the administrative officers of the State to levy such tax as they shall find necessary up to the limit named. The Legislature cannot, under the constitution, thus delegate the power of taxation. They must determine the amount necessary and adequate and declare the amount to be levied absolutely. If this form of enactment is allowable, a law authorizing a tax of fifty per cent. of the assessed value of the taxable property of the State, or so much thereof as might be necessary, would be valid, and the whole legislative taxing power delegated to the other departments of the State government. The law is invalid as not stating the tax imposed."

Every word of this criticism is applicable to chap. 702, laws of 1872. The amount of the tax on the citizens of New York is by that act made dependent upon the estimate of the Board of Engineers, not upon the Legislature.

We now come to the provisions as to title, that "no private or local bill shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title." In some of its aspects, this act must be regarded as a private bill. The features granting to the Harlem Railroad the right to build additional permanent tracks is, practically, an amendment to a private charter, and the transfer of the tunnel to such railroad also distinguishes this measure from a public one. But we are relieved from all doubt as to the question whether the constitutional provision applies, by the fact that it is undoubtedly a local act, and as such is subject to this provision.

First. Is the object expressed in the title? The framers of the constitution meant to reach and effect substantial things and cure real evils in each one of the provisions of the instrument; and this section relating to title was framed to reach the special evil of smuggling through measures under false pretenses. Theretofore it constantly occurred that so-called "riders" to general laws effected important private and local objects, and vice versa. Pivotal legislative crafts sailing under false colors. The title to a bill is the flag by which it is to be known, and its characters should be so clear that any lay person or legislator reading it would understand to what subject it relates and what is intended to be accomplished by it. This act is entitled "An act to improve and regulate the use of Fourth Avenue in the city of New York." Now, in so far as this act is a constitutional exercise of the Legislative power, its object is properly expressed in the title. It states the nuisance of the use to which the Fourth Avenue had been theretofore put, and provides for the building of a tunnel through and a viaduct over it, and therefore may be said both to "improve and to regulate the use of the Fourth Avenue in the city of New York." But is the fact expressed in the title that there is involved in the bill the levy of a tax of almost four millions of dollars upon the citizens of New York, and a transfer of all the value created by the money thus raised and to be expended to a private corporation, "for the exclusive use and purposes of such corporation?" Would any one suspect that in the bowels of a bill, entitled as this one, is contained the granting of a valuable franchise to a private corporation such as is contained in the 2d section, and half of the expense of the building of such new railway line is to be borne by the citizens of New York, without participation in the profits thereof? Any legislator, on looking over the files of the bills, coming across this one, would naturally, unless he was put on his guard by extraneous knowledge, suppose it to be a bill to authorize the grading, guttering and paving of a public street for the public benefit, and nothing more. The flagitious and extraordinary exercise of power thereby attempted he would not and could not suspect from its title; and as the constitution intended that he shall not thus be deceived, this bill is clearly obnoxious on that ground alone.

If this bill is properly entitled, the Legislature can charter a private corporation to build a railroad and equip it from Montauk Point to the St. Lawrence, and authorize the levy of a tax upon the people of the State, to be paid in "warrants to the order of the treasurer of such railway," to pay the expense thereof, under the title of "An act to improve and regulate the use of certain strips of land between the Long Island Sound and the St. Lawrence river." It is clear, therefore, that the subject of this bill is not expressed in its title.

Second. Does it contain more than one subject? It contains three distinct subjects. Except that they all unite in benefiting the railroad corporation, they have no necessary relation with each other.

Subject No. 1, is the one expressed in the title. Subject No. 2. The granting of a franchise of great value to the Harlem railroad.

Subject No. 3. The raising and levying of a tax and the expenditure of the money thus raised. There can, therefore, be no doubt but that the sixteenth section of the third article of the Constitution has been flagrantly violated by the act under examination.

A still more fatal objection to the act in question is its violation of the ninth section of the first article of the Constitution.

"The assent of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the Legislature shall be requisite to every bill appropriating the public moneys or property for local or private purposes." This bill was not passed by a two-thirds vote; and it is incumbent upon us now to examine whether the act in question is an appropriation of public moneys for local or private purposes.

That it is an appropriation of money raised by taxation for a local purpose is too plain to require more than its statement. The second and ninth sections make it equally plain that the money thus to be raised is for a private purpose. The whole act explains this and leaves no room for doubt. There is first a charge upon the City of New York to bear half the expense of a local improvement (if you please so to call it), then the exercise of the sovereign power of taxation to raise the money to pay for it, and then an appropriation of the money thus raised by directing the Comptroller to issue his warrants to the order of the treasurer of the railway company, and then a transfer to the railway company of the values created.

Is the money to be raised by taxation from the citizens of New York and to be thus dedicated to the Harlem Railroad, "public money," in the sense in which these words are used in the Constitution? Public money is money which flows to the State as revenue from its public works, or which is raised by the exercise of the sovereign power of the State by taxation from the property of its citizens or a portion thereof. There is no taxing power anywhere except in the Legislature, and all local municipal bodies derive their power to tax from legislative authority, and legislative authority only. Taxation is the supreme power which is the badge of sovereignty, and there are cases in our own court of last resort which have held that the Legislature can direct moneys which are raised by taxation in one locality to be expended for the benefit of a locality in another part of the State. It is not the mere formality that the Comptroller of the city instead of the State Comptroller has been selected to disburse this money, which creates the distinction between public and private money, nor that it was in the city instead of the State treasury on which the draft was drawn. In the recent case of the United States vs. Railroad Company, 17 Wallace 322, the United States Supreme Court held that "A municipal corporation is a representative, not only of the State, but is a portion of its governmental power. It is one of its creatures, made for a specific purpose, to exercise, within a limited sphere, the powers of the State. The State may withdraw these local powers of government at pleasure, and may, through the Legislature or other appointed channels, govern the local territory as it governs the State at large."

The framers of this section of our state constitution, which is already to be found in the earlier constitution of 1821, as part of section 9, article 7, meant substantial things, and not mere forms in framing it, and did not and could not intend to have it evaded by the transparent subterfuge that all the Legislature need do to dispose of the public funds of the State by a mere majority-vote for any purpose they list, is to appropriate them before they reach the State Treasury. If no citizen nor resident of one of our States can, by any device, trick or artifice, circumvent the intent of the law, the Legislature is equally inhibited by a device or trick to circumvent the intent of its higher law, the Constitution. That the money raised by taxation from the citizens of New York, and their property is public money, cannot be doubted; that the Constitution did not and could not have meant, by this large and comprehensive designation, the actual money in the State Treasury only, is proved by that instrument itself. Section 8 of Article 7, of the constitution says: "No moneys shall ever be paid out of the State Treasury of this State, or any of its funds, or any of the funds under its management, except in pursuance of an appropriation by law." This shows that when the framers of the constitution meant the Treasury of the State they said so.

Should any advocate of this bill suggest that the money raised, and to be raised by taxation under this act in the City of New York, is not public money, then it is private money; there is no middle ground. If it is private money, then the Legislature had no control nor disposition whatever over it. There are numerous provisions of the constitution which protect the private property of the inhabitants of New York from wanton seizure and transfer. Then this act is spoliation, pure and simple, and in direct violation of the constitutional injunction that no person shall "be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation." (Sec. 6, Art. 1.) And "when private property shall be taken for any public use, the compensation to be made therefor, when such compensation is not made by the State, shall be ascertained by a jury, or by not less than three Commissioners appointed by a Court of Record, as shall be prescribed by law." (Sec. 7, Art. 1.) So, upon either horn of this dilemma, this act, or so much thereof as I believe to be obnoxious, is transfixed.

The last section has not received any authoritative interpretation by our court of last resort, except in People vs. Allen, 47 N. Y. 378, since its adoption by the convention of 1846; although anterior to that year that part of it which related to the application of the two-thirds vote to the creating, altering or renewing any body corporate or politic, was frequently before the courts. Ignorant report and constitutional index makers have spoken of this section as referring to appropriations from State Treasury; but there is warrant neither in its context, nor by the application of any rational canon of interpretation, nor in the position of honor this section holds as part of what was originally the bill of rights, to admit of so narrow and forced a construction.

There are numerous decisions in this and our sister States which support the views herein expressed, but they would scarcely be properly in place in this opinion. Still, I cannot refrain from referring you to the case of People vs. Batchelor, 8 Sickles 128, where it was held that the Legislature could not, on general principles, compel a municipality to subscribe to the stock of a railroad company. How much less can it, as in this case, compel it to give its money away?

For the reasons I have mentioned, I am persuaded that you would not be justified in signing any warrant upon the city treasury for the carrying out of the purposes of chap. 702, of the laws of 1872.

Respectfully,
SIMON STERNE.

To Hon. Wm. F. Havemeyer, Mayor of the city of New York.

TEACHERS.

Commissioner Halsted presented reports from the Committee on Teachers, as follows:

To grant a leave of absence to Miss Eleanor Ford, G. S. No. 61. Adopted.

Also, relative to violations of the by-laws relating to corporal punishment, as follows: To the Board of Education:

The Committee on Teachers having had under consideration two communications relative to the violation of the provisions of the by-laws regarding corporal punishment—

One from the City Superintendent complaining against Anna M. Sparks, a teacher in the Male Department of Grammar School No. 27; and the other from Mr. Warren H. Rose, complaining against Miss S. E. Wandell, a teacher in Primary School No. 24, respectfully report:

That they have fully inquired into these charges, by summoning before them, and hearing the evidence of all the parties interested in the allegations, as well as the trustees of the respective wards.

The teachers complained against have, in each case, acknowledged the transgression of the law, but have pleaded in extenuation of their offence that under the regulations of the Board they find it extremely difficult to maintain proper discipline in their class rooms since the abolition of corporal punishment.

The Committee, while recognizing the force of the position taken by the teachers, feel that it is their duty to faithfully carry out the provisions of the by-laws, and to mete out the penalty to those who have been guilty of their infraction. There are, however, certain facts connected with the cases here mentioned, which have induced the Committee to be more lenient in their recommendation than they can promise to be in future. Miss Wandell has been for many years a successful and deserving teacher, and has by her skill and ability won for herself the good opinion of those who have been specially charged with the management of the schools in the Ninth ward. Miss Sparks is a young, and consequently inexperienced teacher, and this being her first violation, the Committee were loath to visit upon her the extreme penalty of the law prescribed in such cases.

For these reasons it has been recommended that the conduct of the aforesaid teachers, in violating section 44 of the by-laws, be censured by this Board, and that it be further ordered, that in the case of Miss Sparks the trustees of the Nineteenth ward be requested to transfer her to some other department or school.

The Committee, in presenting these facts to the Board, desire to state that several complaints of the character herein stated have lately been brought to their attention, and that from the evidence elicited in the investigation of these cases, it appears that the discipline and management of our schools have deteriorated since the repeal of the law giving the Principals the right to inflict, in certain cases, corporal punishment upon such pupils as cannot be controlled in any other way.

There appears to be, on the part of nearly all the teachers and principals, a desire for a change of the law in this respect, and a return to the old provision which was in vogue in 1869, and which was found to work satisfactorily, and to the great advantage of the discipline pursued in the public schools.

The following resolutions are submitted: Resolved, That Miss Anna M. Sparks be and she is hereby reprimanded for her conduct in violating the provisions of Section 44 of the By-laws, and that the Trustees of the Nineteenth Ward be requested to transfer her to some other department.

Resolved, That Miss S. E. Wandell be and she is hereby reprimanded for her conduct in violating Section 44 of the By-laws.
